LOSS

FROM FLOODS NOT LESS THAN $5,000,000

AT LEAST A SCORE OF PEOPLE HAVE PERISHED.

FRESHETS SLOWLY RECEDING.

River at Pittsburg 26 Feet and Receding Two Inches Per Hour—Reports of the Flood.

Passaic, N. J., March 3.—Six unknown men were drowned at Cutwater
bridge, two miles from here last night.
They were trying to keep debris from
the structure, which was weak, when
a heavy flow of water struck the bridge and carried it away. The men cried for help but no one could save them.

Parkersburg, W. Va., March 3.—A traffic is entirely suspended on the Ohio river railroad, West Virginia
Short Line, Ravenswood, Spencer &
Glenville, and Ripley & Mill Creek
Valley railroads, on account of floods.
Heavily loaded cars have been placed on trestles on these roads to prevent them washing out.

Pittsburg, Pa., March 3.—10 a. m.—
The river is receding at the rate of 2 inches an hour. The stage is now 26 feet.

Parkersburg, W. Va., March 3.—The river this morning is 38.5 feet, two and a half inches above the danger line, and rising another inch. Only a few more inches are expected today.
The water this morning is in first and ann streets, but no business houses
are flooded.

Pittsburg, Pa., March 3.—The weather is very cold here this morning with light snow falling. The noon in the rivers continues to recede. Several days must elapse before conditions are normally restored. A great many of the mills and factories suffered serious damage from flood and mud deposit. An estimate of damage from this cause to manufacturers place the figures at a million and a quarter dollars.

Rochester, N. Y., March 3.—The Genesee river is at its highest point
since 1869.

Scranton, Pa., March 3.—The waters
of Lackawanna river receded many feet during the night and all danger
of further damage from an overflow
is past. Another heavy snow fall accrued during the night which is rapidly
thawing away this morning.

Binghamton, N. Y., March 3.—At midnight the water was within eight inches of the mark of 1865. Since midnight the water has been falling and the danger is past. The loss will reach $100,000 in the city alone. Terrible damage is reported from all parts of the Susquehanna and Chenango Val-

DERIDES PRINCE'S TRIP.

Berlin, March 3.—In the Reichstag
today Fritz Kuerner, social democrat, derided Prince Henry's trip and his friendly reception in America. Imperial Chancellor Von Buelow, angered at Kuerner's remarks, indignantly answered that Prince Henry's trip was
of no special political significance,
but was only maintaining an old
friendship connecting two nations,
from the times of Frederick, and the great Washington. Von Buelow's remarks were loudly cheered.

TWO FATALLY HURT.

Muncie, Ind., March 3.—Bert Lee
and Albert Newker were fatally injured in an explosion at the gas pumping station today. Loss $40,000.

More Fighting.

Washington, March 3.—(Bulletin.)
—There is more fighting between the Columbia rebels and the government forces on the isthmus of Panama. No details.

STOCK MARKET DECISION.

Washington, March 3.—The United States Supreme Court today affirmed
a judgment of the Supreme Court of Illinois in the case of Alfred V. Booth vs. the State of Illinois. Booth was arrested under a statute making it a crime to deal in futures on the stock market. Today's decision upholds the constitutionality of the statute in question.

Strike Ended.

Norfolk, Va., March 3.—The striking street car employes after a tie up of 60 hours came to an agreement with the employers and returned to work at 11 o'clock this morning.

Chicago Blaze.

Chicago, Ill., March 3.—This morning fire destroyed the electric light plant of the suburb of Oak Park; loss $100,000.

Mrs. Soffel's Trial.

Pittsburg, Pa., March 3.—Mrs. Kate
Soffel will be tried next week for helping the Biddle boys to escape, unless the severe cold she caught coming from Butler should develop into something serious. The grand jury will take up her case Wednesday. Probably the trial will not be long.

JIMMY GALVIN DYING.

Pittsburg, Pa., March 1.—The condition of Jimmy Galvin, the famous ballplayer, who is lying at death's door
is still more serious today.

DEATH

Of Mrs. Mary Robison Occurred Satu-
day Afternoon After a Short Illness—The Funeral.

Mrs. Mary Robison wife of George Robison, a carpenter, at the B. & C shops, died Saturday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock after an illness of less than a week.

The deceased on the Sunday before took a severe cold, which settled in the stomach and bowels, causing inflammation, and from Wednesday until Saturday morning, she grew rapidly
worse, suffering excruciating agony.

Saturday morning she was given a hypodermic injection of morphine to alleviate her suffering and it is said she never rallied from it, sleeping peacefully away.

There were numerous sensational rumors afloat concerning the woman's death, and the attending physician
was criticized in some quarters, but the family are perfectly satisfied that her death was not caused by the injection, but that the pain was eased
by its administration.

A husband and three sons survive.

The funeral took place this morning at 2 o'clock from the First M. E. church, Rev. A. E. Johnson conducting the services. Interment in Cedar Hill.

MRS. IDEN'S DEATH.

Mrs. Rosanna Iden, widow of the late Samuel Iden, died Sunday morning at her home, 334 Buena Vista street, aged 75 years.

She leaves seven grown children to mourn her death.

The funeral will take place Tuesday morning at Bowling Green church, interment in Shannon's cemetery.

SHEPPARD ARRESTED.

William Sheppard, deputy game
warden at Black Hand, was arrested about 10 o'clock this morning by Officers Zengle and Rinehart on an affidavit filed by William Kennedy, also of Black Hand, charging Sheppard
with threatening to shoot his wife.

Mingo Junction—Wassil Paluch,
saloon keeper, was shot by Edward Buchanan, aged 19. Paluch went to chase mischievous boys away and
thinking Buchanan was one of them,
choked him and the boy hit him.
Paluch ran into the saloon for the bung starter, and when he struck Buchanan with it the boy shot Paluch.

POPE

BEGINS TWENTY-FIFTH YEAR
OF PONTIFICATE

GREAT MASS AT ST. PETER'S ON MONDAY MORNING.

TOOK PEOPLE FOUR HOURS

To Enter by Four Doors, Fifty of the Eighty Thousand Being Admitted—Pope's Birthday.

Rome, March 3.—The Pope's silver jubilee culminated this morning in a great mass at St. Peter's. About 50, 000 of the 80,000 people who had congregated were admitted. It took four hours to enter by four doors. The entire concourse within the building
stood with few exceptions.

Cardinal Vannutelli celebrated the mass, the Pope attending from the throne.

After the service the Pope explained
to several members of his retinue: "I

LEO XIII.

really never thought I would see this day. The devotion of so many of the faithful touches me extremely."
Leo impressed every one with his kindness and especially his robust voice when pronouncing the benediction. His words were heard distinctly throughout the immense basilica. The applause of the crowd was positively raucous.

His Holiness Pope Leo XIII. Sunday
entered upon his ninety-third year.
Owing to his feeble health and his natural aversion to ostentation, the event was not publicly celebrated,
but by the members of his household
he day was fittingly observed. It is also a remarkable fact that though he was elected to the Pontifical chair on February 20, 1878, Leo was not formally crowned as Pope until March 3 of that year, and therefore today he began the 25th year of his long pontificate. Should he live to complete it
he will then celebrate his silver jubilee as Pope, his golden jubilee as cardinal and his diamond jubilee as an Archbishop.

"Good For Micah"

Columbia, S. C., March 3.—In reference to the telegram of Major Micah Jenkins to Lieutenant Governor Tillman, declining to accept the sword,
because of Tillman's action, the State
said Sunday:

"Good for Micah Jenkins' will come spontaneously from the lips of South Carolinians on the reading of this note
for the action taken is that of a soldier and gentleman."

President Roosevelt sent the following telegram:

"To Governor M. B. McSweeney, Columbia, S. C.: Pray accept my heartfelt thanks for your courteous telegram, which I appreciate."

SUICIDE

Of Henry Perkins, Millionaire of Warren, Ohio, Whose Son at Yale Killed Himself.

Warren, O., March 3.—Hon. Henry Bishop Perkins, one of Ohio's most prominent and philanthropic citizens,
killed himself by hanging Sunday at his office, adjoining his home in this city.

The body was found shortly before-
noon by his family, who went to call him to dinner.

Illness and the suicide of a favor-
son, a Yale graduate a year ago, is believed to have made Mr. Perkins temporarily insane. Mr. Perkins was born in Warren and always lived here.

He was president of the First National bank in Warren and also prominent in railroad and state affairs. He was a man of large fortune said to be
three or four million of dollars.

FIRE

STARTED BY A EXPLOSION IN NEW YORK

CAUSES A HEAVY LOSS AND A NUMBER OF INJURIES.

JUMPED FROM THE SIXTH FLOOR

Did Two of Those Hurt—Explosion
Scattered Fire in All Directions.
The Injured.

New York, March 3.—Twelve people injured, two fatally injured and three missing, is the result of a fire caused by an explosion in a celluloid manufactory, in a five-story building at 212 Canal street this morning. The fire quickly spread to four buildings
on either side of 212 Canal street, and they were almost completely destroyed.
Most of these hurt were injured
by jumping from windows.

The fire was discovered shortly after 3 o'clock today in a scrap box in a celluloid manufactory of James Wilkinson by a young lad named Joseph Colletti. He ran to give the alarm
but before he could do so the fire ignited the celluloid and the explosion occurred. All the windows were blown out and the flames were scattered in every direction. John Mc-Sweeney, a passerby ran and turned in the alarm and then rushed into an eight story tenement to help rescue
the inmates. The fire spread so quickly that many people jumped from windows and doors to avoid the danger of erection. Conchitti Durando, an Italian woman, leaped from the sixth story to the ground. She was picked up in a dying condition and taken to the hospital. Her grandchild, Sada Durando, was badly burned. Daniel Webster Shellard, in an attempt to escape, made a flying leap from the sixth floor of the celluloid manufactory to catch a blind on a neighboring house on Baxter street. He grabbed the iron window, but it failed to sus-tain his weight and he was precipitated to the ground. He was so badly hurt that the doctors say he will die.
Ellwood Quimby an employe of Wilkinson also leaped from the sixth floor and was badly hurt. The fire was brought under control about nine o'clock and many firemen entered
the buildings to fight the flames.

While the fire workers were running
their hose along the sixth floor of 212
Canal street, the floor gave way and Charles Cavanagh, a fireman fell down
the entire six floors. Fortunately he was not seriously injured. Joseph Buckley, another fireman, also fell but caught himself on the floor below and he was not badly hurt. The buildings were occupied by various small manufactories and the total damage will reach about $200,000.

The injured are:
Conchitti Durando, will die; Daniel Webster Shellard, broken leg and otherwise injured, will die; Philomena
Van-ovenni, Chas. Cavanagh, cut;
James Lawrence, burned, 149 Adams
street, Brooklyn. Maurice McElroy, Salomon, Lavitt, Ellwood, Ellwood Quimby, Blonda Hartong, run over by fire engine; Sada Durando, burned,
John McSweeney cut by glass; Blanche
Durando, died at 9:15 a. m.

Robbed a Bank.

Joliet, Ill., March 3.—The private bank of Kearby Harrison & Co. at Ellwood, nine miles south, was entered by burglars Sunday and $15,000 in cash stolen. The discovery was not made until this morning.

PRINCE

HERE SATURDAY BUT DIDN'T STOP

BIG CROWD AT THE DEPOT WAS DISAPPOINTED.

MAGNIFICENT SPECIAL TRAIN,

Which Carried the Kaiser's Brother
Went Through Newark at 4:36
Saturday Afternoon.

An informal reception committee consisting of about 2500 of Newark's
citizens of every race, creed, politics
and religion, went down to the Pan Handle depot Saturday afternoon to greet Prince Henry of Prussia, who passed through Newark, en route to the historic battle ground and National Park at Chickamauga.

The members of the committee carried out their part without any hitch,
and it was not their fault that the Kaiser's brother did not receive an enthusiastic reception, but there was one thing that spoiled the entire program—the train did not stop and the Prince did not appear, that he might be
"received."

For an hour the great crowd stood
about the station and good naturedly
jostled and "jollied" each other. Every once in a while some one would yell "here she comes," from points of vantage on numerous freight cars and lumber piles, and every eye would be strained eastward along the stretch of track extending from the depot to the bridge, west of Main street. The area of tracks was crowded with people,
who on other occasions would have been in imminent danger of being crushed by trains or yard engines, switching back and forth. But on Saturday afternoon everything was at a standstill. The semaphores throughout the city along the line of the Pan Handle, were vertical for the Pan Handle trains, yard engines "got in the clear" and remained stationary, all in obedience to the order issued to switchmen, target men, yard men and others, "Clear all yards and crossings
for second 19, Prince Henry's special."

At last the train appeared, and as it approached the depot every eye was strained to catch a glimpse of the royal passenger. It approached and passed the depot at a rate of probably 15
miles an hour, two secret service men
stood on the rear platform, the crowd cheered, and the Prince was on his road to Columbus, no one having got even a peep at royalty.

The interest in the passenger was so great and the desire to see him so eager, that very few noticed the train itself.

The train was a solid vestibuled affair, fully as heavy as the pride of Pennsylvania, the limited. The latter is the heaviest regular train in the world that runs on so fast a schedule,
and from Wilmore to Pittsburg the train carrying Prince Henry ran at the limited's speed, making up almost a half hour of its lost time.

The royal train was run as the second section of No. 19, commonly known as the southwest express.
A light engine, which was sent on a few minutes ahead of the train bearing the nation's guest, ran as first section, and the regular sections followed
as sections 3 and 4.

The special train itself was composed of seven Pullman cars, the Utoma, composite car; the Biscay, a sleeper; the Willard, a diner; the Iowa, Indiana and Ohio, compartment
cars and on the rear the private observation car, Columbia, in which the royal visitor spent most of his time
during the trip.

The train was pulled by engine 147
of the Ft. Wayne, which made the run over the Pan Handle. The engine was of the Atlantic type and although a Ft.
Wayne engine, had been in use for some time on the Pan Handle. It was newly painted and beautifully clean and trim it looked as it came down the yards with brasses shining and wheels
rolling silently over the steel tracks.

On its journey over the Pittsburgh &
the Pan Handle the train
was in charge of Conductor Thomas
E. Laughhead, with Charles Bigham
and James Neely as brakemen. William Bell and William H. Mattoon
were in the locomotive cab.

The train passed through Newark at 4:36 and arrived in Columbus in about an hour.

There was much genuine disappointment manifested over the fact that the Prince did not appear and let Newark have a glimpse of the man who is just now occupying the center
of the stage in a drama now being presented to the world, in which two powerful nations are taking the leading parts.

When the train appeared in sight of Moser & Wehrle's, the big whistle announced its approach, and the Prince appeared on the platform and ac-knowledgeed the salute. He remained outside the car until he passed the Newark Machine company, receiving the enthusiastic cheers of crowds of people along the track in West Newark.

It is thought that had the royal visitor known that the large crowd had assembled at the depot, he would have appeared there, also.

PRINCE HENRY

Rode With the Man at the Throttle.
Engineer's Story.

Pittsburg, March 3.—Prince Henry's
first ride on an American locomotive was the novel feature of his trip between Altoona and Pittsburg. This little experience had been arranged for a few days, but was kept quiet by the railroad officials. When Engineer J. W.
Gilchrist and Fireman L. C. Palmer, of Engine 1976, took their machine out of the round house at Altoona, they were given orders to permit the prince and high officials of the party to ride
on the locomotive. After the train had run for some distance out of Altoona the Prince retired to his apartments and removed his uniform.

He soon appeared in civilian attire,
with a plain cap on his head, and announced his readiness to leave the handsome car for the engine cab. The train was stopped at Lilly. The Prince, Admiral Count Baudissin and two officials of the party went forward and were assisted in mounting the steps to the engine cab. The Prince sat behind Engineer Gilchrist and Admiral Baudissin took a seat behind Fireman Palmer. The other officials stood behind the cab, in the tender.

The Prince became instantly absorbed in what was going on about him. Engineer Gilchrist in giving an account of his experience with the royal official to a reporter, said: "He was chatty and intensely interested in the locomotive. The first thing he said was: 'We have engines, but nothing like this in our country.' The Prince wanted to know all about the engine, how fast it could run and how much coal it took to feed her on a trip. He looked at the engine tender and admired its capaciousness. Then he picked up a piece of the coal and examined it minutely with Admiral Baudissin."

He explained to Engineer Gilchrist
that he was familiar with railroad affairs, but had never seen such a fine engine as this before. He understood
the injector, which was shown to him,
and said that he had seen them in Germany. As the conversation continued Engineer Gilchrist gradually brought his engine, notch by notch to a higher speed, finally bowling along at the rate of about 65 miles an hour.

The great machine rolled and rocked as the Prince gazed out ahead of him on the long winding tracks and realized how fast he was going. He turned to the engineer with an admiring and pleased expression, shook his head and said: "Isn't she a flyer, though?" He watched the telegraph
poles as they seemed to fly past him
and then again he turned and studied
the mechanical workings of the big machine.

Engineer Gilchrist finally discovered that his machine needed water. He told the Prince that he would get water without stopping at a tank. He tried to explain the scoop that was under the tender, and pointed out the long trough at the center of the track
as the engine approached it. The Prince seemed deeply interested, but wholly unable to understand the mechanism
of the engine.

When the fireman dropped the
scoop there was close attention paid
to the rush of water into the tank.
It could not be heard and the Prince and Admiral Baudissin looked mystified. When it was possible for Engineer Gilchrist to give attention to his job, he tried to explain the system,
which meant the saving of so much water in the railroad. The Prince said

JURY

FINDS THAT DR. BURNETT IS GUILTY.

RECOMMENDS FIFTEEN YEARS' IMPRISONMENT.

THE VERDICT WAS A SURPRISE,

As the Court's Instructions Were Considered Favorable to Defendant.
New Trial Wanted.

Chicago, Ill., March 3.—The jury in the case of Dr. Orville Burnett, who had been on trial charged with the murder of Mrs. Charlotte S. Nichol, of Nashville, Tenn., returned a verdict of guilty and recommended that Burnett be sent to the penitentiary for fifteen years. Burnett's attorneys will ask for a new trial today. The verdict was a surprise, as Judge Baker's instructions to the jury were considered favorable to the defendant.

The case was one of the most unusual that has ever been tried in the Cook county criminal court. Burnett, who is a young dentist, was charged with being accessory before and after the act to the death of Mrs. Nichol, even though it was admitted by the prosecution that Mrs. Nichol had committed suicide.

The state endeavored to establish the point that Burnett and Mrs. Nichol agreed to commit suicide together and that the man weakened, allowing the woman to go to her death alone. The defense disputed that there had been any agreement between the two to end
their lives together and asserted that
Mrs. Nichol had taken her own life, while Burnett was lying intoxicated at her side.

That he never loved Mrs. Nichol and that she was weak, no matter how large
or splendid his physique or how strong
his mind, when a designing woman
seeks his downfall was the burden of Orville S. Burnett's testimony when he took the stand in Judge Baker's court to defend himself against the charge of murder in connection with the death of Mrs. Charlotte Shoup Nichol at the Marlborough Hotel October 29, 1901.

True to the statement made by his attorney P. H. O'Donnell, Burnett corroborated what the attorney said
by further blackening the name of the woman he had failed to die
with. Into the testimony he dragged the names of two other women, who it is alleged, were often with Mrs. Nichol.
Upon these women—Miss Kirby
Smith, of Suwanee, Tenn., Mrs. Nichol's girlhood home, and Mrs. Sallie Blackwell—and Mrs. Nichol he placed
the blame of his downfall.

The Miss Smith mentioned is the daughter of General Kirby Smith, the head of one of the most prominent families in Tennessee, and who was a valiant confederate officer. She was not there to give the lie to Burnett's statements that she was the companion of Mrs. Charlotte Shoup Nichol on several of the visits paid to saloons
and cafes Burnett swore that he and the woman had attended. Miss Smith,
the woman whose name was not
out in unenviable light, is an Assistant Postmistress at Suwanee, Tenn.
It is said, she was a guest of Mrs.
Nichol. Another woman whose name was brought into the trial as a companion of Mrs. Nichol and Miss Smith is also of a prominent Southern family—The Blackwells. Attempts were made to get both women as witnesses
by the prosecution, but Miss Smith refused to come and Mrs. Sallie Blackwell is not in the city.

Occupying a front seat in the row of benches outside the railing forbidden
her by Judge Baker sat Burnett's wife.
It was with downcast eyes and reddened
cheeks that she heard her husband's story.

Never once did Burnett admit he was to blame in any way in the tragedy. They in Mrs. Nichol, he swore, always intimated and pressed him to go walking to the lake, to the saloons, and to the lawless corners of the Marlborough Hotel.

WATER WORKS

The Real Question on Which the People Are to Vote at the Coming Election.

After stating that it wants a fair discussion of the water works proposition on which the people of Newark are to vote, and admitting that the ordinance submitting the question was passed by 10 Democrats and 3 Republicans, which was unanimous, the American-Tribune makes the following peculiar allegation:

"It looks just a little suspicious at this time to endeavor to throw the responsibility of the passage of the ordinance on the Republican members of the city council, when the discussion of the matter has been begun. This effort will prove futile, for the figures show for themselves to the contrary."

But pray, neighbor, who wants to throw responsibility on the Republican members of the council? How can they be held responsible for doing right? If, as you say elsewhere in your article, that the 3 Republican members could not have defeated the ordinance by voting against it, simply shows that they voted their honest convictions by voting for it. They certainly voted intelligently, after thorough investigation, and hence it must be conceded that they voted conscientiously. The Advocate maintains that the 3 Republicans deserve as much credit for doing the right and proper thing in proportion to their number as the 10 Democrats do. Therefore any talk about "responsibility" is decidedly out of place.

But the fact is the three Republicans could have defeated the passage of the ordinance that night, for it required 12 votes to pass it under a suspension of the rules. The American-Tribune seems to object to the ordinance because it does not provide, as that paper claims, for purchasing the old water works plant. But will the American-Tribune cite any law authorizing the submission of this question in any other way than that provided in the ordinance as passed? Does the American-Tribune pretend to say that the city council can pass such an ordinance in any other way than that provided by law? Furthermore, is there not reason for the opinion that in "establishing" water works under this ordinance, the council would have legal right to purchase the old system?

If the American Tribune takes the position that the old water works plant ought to be purchased, it should convince the tax payers that it FAVORS SOME DEFINITE PLAN by which the price paid shall not be exorbitant.

But this is a side issue. The only question on which the people are to vote is as to whether the city shall take the necessary steps to OWN THE WATER WORKS. That is the question the citizens are to vote upon.

WHO WON THE VICTORY IN THE SENATE?

It requires a reading of the verbatim report in the Congressional Record to fully understand the importance of the debates in the Tillman case, when the Republicans made an attempt to sustain the ruling of the President of the Senate, Mr. Frye, that Tillman, as in contempt of the Senate, had no right to vote or enter a protest. He subsequently withdrew these decisions, but only after he had the constitutional law and logic of the situation hammered into his head by two Democratic senators, new faces in the Senate, but of splendid ability and power in debate. "It is of

To Cure Grip in Two Days.

Laxative Bromo-Quinine. A cure for the common cold, E. W. Groves' distinctive remedy.

Interest," says the Springfield Republican, considering the debate at length, as a constitutional landmark, "that the honors of victory rest entirely with two of the newer and younger members of the opposition, Mr. Bailey of Texas and Mr. Turner of Washington, who bore the whole burden of the attack upon Mr. Frye's ruling. They did the work with a persistence and brilliancy that commands admiration, for against them in defense of the ruling were arranged the oldest and keenest lawyers on the Republican side. Mr. Turner, it appears, is an able jurist and has been an associate justice of the supreme court of the State of Washington. Mr. Bailey, a younger man, certainly established by his duel with Messrs. Foraker, Spooner, Hoar and Aldrich his right to be considered a constitutional lawyer of the front rank in the Senate chamber."

The apology of President Frye for refusing to entertain Senator Turner's appeal from his decision has been noted, but not the attempt made by the Republicans to howl Mr. Turner down. He had the greatest difficulty in entering a protest against the chair's ruling that South Carolina could not be represented in the roll call. When he appealed from the chair's decision and attempted to speak on the question whether the ruling was sound, he was confronted by loud cries for the "regular order" from the other side, and for half an hour he had to fight his way against the parliamentary objections of Messrs. Aldrich, Hoar, Lodge and Burrows before he could proceed without interruption. Finally he was recognized by the chair on a question of privilege, which was that the State of South Carolina had been deprived of a constitutional right. In the speech that followed Mr. Turner presented the issue so clearly and strongly that the Senate was compelled to listen to a two-hours' debate in the very midst of the voting on the Philippine tariff bill. Mr. Foraker found it necessary to answer Mr. Turner and in the ensuing discussion Mr. Bailey of Texas, quickly bounded to the front as the expositor of the positions the Washington senator had occupied. Mr. Bailey's performance was brilliant and successful in parrying the positions of Senator Aldrich, who is versed in parliamentary law. The Texan proved himself the better. At last the president of the Senate and the Republican senators joined in a helter-skelter of retreat from their untenable position.

THE WATER WORKS AND HOSPITAL ORDINANCES.

The Advocate will continue to publish the water works and city hospital ordinances from time to time until the election, in order that the citizens may have opportunity to refer to them on all occasions when the subject matter comes under discussion. For this the Advocate will make no charge against the city. An error occurred in the water works ordinance the first day it was printed in the Advocate's account of the city council proceedings, the word "establish" being omitted in the clause describing the purpose of the issue of the bonds. But correction was made in the Advocate the next day when the ordinance was published officially.

The American-Tribune, perhaps, has not noticed this error, for it has not printed the ordinance with this correction.

The SPORTING WORLD

Jockey's Off For Europe Again.
Encouraged by their successes of last year American horse pilots are again going abroad in large numbers. The last week or two have witnessed the departure of a round dozen of the clever little fellows anxious to corral pocketfuls of the shining necessary shekels. And many good luck be with them all.

Among the saddle straddlers who expect to figure in foreign turf victories during the coming summer are Cassius ("Cash") Sloan, the game brother of Tod; Milton Henry, Patsy Freeman, CASSIUS ("CASH") SLOAN.

Burt Krapp, Archie McIntyre, Charley Van Dusen and Jimmy Michael, the premier of cyclists. Cash Sloan acquired considerable fame last year by his sensational work in Russia on the backs of the horses of Jean De Reszko, the opera star. Sloan rode upward of twenty consecutive winners. The Russian peasants played his mounts irrespective of their ability and reputation, and on one occasion, when Cash failed to win, the enraged spectators surrounded him and endeavored to do him bodily injury. The police were compelled to go to his rescue.

Danny Maher, the former bookblack, is to ride for King Edward. Although his mounts will run under the name of Boreford, in reality they are the sole property of Britain's sovereign. Maher's salary has been fixed at $35,000.

Aquatic Outlook at Yale.

Rowing affairs at Yale will be under different management this year from what has usually been the custom. John Kennedy, the well known old professional sculler, will have charge of the crew and conduct the coaching. The amount of rowing done indoors will be decidedly less than formerly, and the entire system of training will be changed in a good many little details.

This does not mean that Yale intends to change her stroke. The stroke of the past three seasons will remain unchanged, but the method of arriving at this stroke will be changed considerably.

After the Harvard race last June the blue's coaches decided that Yale in order to keep up with Harvard must improve her system of boating. With this object in view Kennedy was sent to England to visit Oxford and Cambridge. Kennedy has returned and has been busy at work coaching all those candidates for the crew who were not engaged in some other branch of sport. Kennedy in outlining his ideas about college rowing said: "I am convinced that there is very little difference between the American and English college strokes. As a matter of fact, they are practically the same. I still believe in the American system of rigging and am convinced that it is far superior to the English system. I learned a great deal while I was over there which I think will be of use here at Yale."

The question of a head coach for the Yale crew for the coming year is still undecided. The sentiment is unanimously in favor of P. W. Allen, the last year's head coach, but he does not have the time necessary for the work. Ex-Captain Blagden of last year's crew is also unable to give up his time to the crew this year. This removes the two most desirable men from consideration for this position.

Fournier Is Back.

Henri Fournier of Paris, champion automobilist of the world, and Alexander Verheyen, champion motor cyclist of Germany, have arrived in New York on the Kaiser Wilhelm der Grosse. Alexander Verheyen as a motor cyclist has done a mile in 56 seconds, which is considered remarkable work. He brings a new motor tricycle with which he intends to make a few attempts at breaking records in America.

Alex Grant to Play Lacrosse.

Alexander Grant, the intercollegiate champion two mile runner, will play lacrosse for the University of Pennsylvania this year. Grant is an old Canadian player and was formerly a member of the Toronto Lacrosse association team. He will continue running during the winter, but will quit the track when the lacrosse season opens in April.

Loftis' National Outfield.

Tom Loftis will have three ex-National players in his Washington outfield next season. DeBartolo in left, Kuster in center and Jimmy Ryan in right.

BOWSER'S CONCEIT.

HE DECIDES THAT HIS GRAY HAIR GIVES HIM A FALSE APPEARANCE.

In an Attempt to Remedy the Fault and Renew His Youthful Appearance the Old Man Tries a Barber's Hair Dye. With sad Results.

WHEN the Bowser had returned to the sitting room from dinner the other evening, Mrs. Bowser detected Mr. Bowser taking a glance at himself in the mirror and evidently somewhat perturbed about his hair. She let it pass as one of his "streaks," but after a time he looked at her in a half ashamed way and asked:

"Do you notice how fast my hair is turning gray?"

"Not particularly," she answered. "You have been old enough these five years to have gray hair. You haven't got a great deal, but what there is of it looks well."

"WHAT DO YOU MEAN BY OLD ENOUGH?"

"What do you mean by old enough?" he demanded, with the threat of a family row in his tones.

"Why, most men have gray hair after passing forty, don't they? You were forty-seven your last birthday, and—"

"Who said I was forty-seven?"

"Why—why?"

"There's no why-why about it. My true age is forty-two. If I look five years older, it's because I've had so much trouble with you. If you had your way about it, you'd make out that I was a doddering idiot. How old do you think folks take me to be with my hat on?"

Mrs. Bowser wanted to pass a peace-

been watching things as she lay on the lounge, and as he left the room she jumped down and looked at Mr. Bowser in an inquiring way. She received a shake of the head in reply and walked over and sat down under the piano to await the coming of events. Mr. Bowser had won his point without loss of too much dignity, and he smiled as he sipped the dye over his scanty locks. He had paid $5 for that special preparation, and the eminent cosmetic artist had guaranteed that the results would be almost immediate. Not more than ten minutes had passed when a change could be seen, and the bottle and Bowser went down stairs together. Mrs. Bowser was reading and had no remarks to make, and it was ten minutes before she raised her eyes and took a look at the dyed hair. As she did so she gave a start of surprise and choked back an exclamation.

"What's the matter with you?" asked Mr. Bowser.

"I—I—nothing!"

"You jumped as if something had bitten you. Do you see any difference in my hair?"

"I think I will go up stairs. My head aches."

"Got another cold probably," he growled as she left the room. "She's also a bit mad about this hair dye. I'll take a look in the glass and—"

Those white hairs had not turned black, but a queer brindle, and Mrs. Bowser had realized that she must cut out or explode. One look in the glass jumped Mr. Bowser a foot high, and as he came down on his heels he yelled:

"It can't be! It can't be! I must have dirt in my eyes!"

But the color of that hair was the color of a brindle cow, and when he had satisfied himself of the fact his heart stood still for a minute. Then a great wave of relief came.

"It's simply the first change, of course," he whispered. "One more application and it will be black. What a fool I was to get scared!"

He wasn't over three minutes in putting on another coat, and he held his head to the hot air register to dry the dye the quicker. When he straightened up and took another look in the glass, his hair was no longer brindle, but the color of a yellow dog.

"By thunder! By thunder!" was all he could say as he stood staring at himself and the cat was rolling over the floor in hysterics.

Hope came again, however. This was probably three ply hair dye—brindle, yellow and black. The third application would take ten years off his age by bringing out the true gloss. It was made and dried in, and Mr. Bow-fur evening, and she therefore put the figures at thirty-six.

"From thirty-six to thirty-eight," said Mr. Bowser as his vanity could be read in his face. "and I don't know why I should permit these hairs to make me look ten years older. Only yesterday Brown was saying that I had the step of a man of thirty."

"But what can you do with them?"

"I could dye them, I suppose," he half questioned as something like a blush came to his face and he turned to the glass again.

Mrs. Bowser laughed at the back of his head. She didn't mean to, but she couldn't restrain herself. It was one of Mr. Bowser's funniest as well as latest fails.

"There you go with your giggle, giggle!" he shouted as he turned on her. "Is there anything so execrably funny in my putting a little dye on my hair? During the last four weeks you seem to have lost what little sense you ever had."

"It just struck me as funny that you should turn to hair dye," she explained. "Oh, it struck you, did it? You are always being struck if I make any particular move. I might have known that you would be-haw-he over it, but I was fool enough to ask your opinion. Nevertheless, I shall go ahead and do as I please about it."

"That is, you will dye your hair, and perhaps you will look all the better for it. As you say, there is no need of your looking ten years older than you really are. Did you bring home a bottle of dye?"

"Well, yes. It's not the ordinary hair dye you find in the drugstores, with the smell of a dead horse about it, but something prepared expressly for me by Professor Caton, the eminent tonsorial artist."

"The eminent barber—yes," mused Mrs. Bowser. "He prepared something for you that will decide even his fellow art-ists. Well, I should try it and see how it works. If you can look to be only thirty, I shall feel proud of you."

Mr. Bowser didn't know whether to glare or smile, but finally decided to go up to his room and apply the second lot to directions. The family cat had ser consulted the glass again. What he saw reflected was a head of celery green color, and what Mrs. Bowser heard was such a yell of fury and despair that she was sure the piano must have lifted up one of its legs. Some one seemed to be kicking over chairs and chasing the cat about for a few minutes, and then there was the silence of death. She waited for half an hour and then slipped down stairs. The cat lay on the floor as if dead, and Mr. Bowser was on his knees on the floor before a footpath full of soap-suds. He was seeking to restore his gray hairs and his old age, and as he soaped his green locks he muttered:

"I will see that eminent tonsorial artist tomorrow, and I will take him by the throat, and I will cry ha! ha! ha! and I will squeeze the life out of his lying, swindling carcass and trample on his quivering heart!"

And the cat lifted up her head and chuckled, and Mrs. Bowser softly retreated to her room.

THE INCONVENIENCE OF A RETURN TO LIFE

(Original.)

"The gentleman over the way is dead, sir."

My valet made the announcement as he sat down the tray with my breakfast.

"Poor fellow!" I remarked. "Rather I should pity those who remain behind."

"They're better off than if he kept back, sir."

"What do you mean?"

"I know a man once who kept back, sir, and it was very inconvenient."

"Tell me about it."

He did so, and I listened to his story while I ate my breakfast.

"Pat Dolan was laid out, with candles at his head and feet and covered with a sheet. Pat had been in the best of health till one morning he was found lying beside the road, dead. That's what everybody who saw him said, so his body was made ready for the wake."

"Now, Pat had been a thrifty man and had put by a good many gold pieces, which he kept in a wooden stockin' in the clock. He hadn't been married, but was going to be to a lusty redheaded girl, Bridget O'Toole, twenty years behind him in age. The banns had been published when Pat was found dead. Bridget would have been satisfied with Pat's death if he died a few days after instead of a few days before the wedding; but, knowing the gold pieces Pat had laid away, she preferred to wait even to Tom."

"As Pat couldn't be buried till the doctor returned and certified that he was dead, and the watchers having drunk a deal of Irish whiskey and having been awake two nights in succession, on the third day night sleep. Bridget was becoming impatient, for since there was no relatives to claim Pat's gold and she was to have been his wife she was thinking of his fortune and anxious to get hold of it. About 3 o'clock in the morning every watcher except Bridget O'Toole and Tom Flanagan was asleep. The two set in a corner laying plans for housekeeping as soon as they had secured Pat's gold and a decent time had gone by."

"I'm thinkin', Bridget," said Tom, "ye'd better secure the fortune at once. There'll be a crowd of relatives either if ye give 'em time."

"What a head ye have on ye, Tom, dear," replied Bridget. "I don't know where the gold is, but Pat told me it was hid somewhere in the house. The watchers being asleep, it's a fine time to look."

"With that they got up and hunted the house high and low, at last coming to the old clock. Opening the door, showing the weights and the pendulum within, Bridget bent down, Tom bending over her, and drew up the stockin' filled to the knee with the yellow metal. Then, holding it up, they turned to feast their eyes on it."

"But their eyes saw another sight. Pat's shanty was on the banks of the river, and there never was a river that didn't produce musketeers. It was a beggarly little musketeer that spoiled everything. While Bridget and Tom was huntin' for a fortune the little beast was huntin' for somethin' to eat, and at the moment they found the gold it found blood, good live blood, in the tip of Pat's nose. When Bridget and Tom turned to enjoy the sight of the gold, they saw Pat sittin' up glarin' at 'em."

"Howly mither!" was the first sound that broke the stillness of death, and a third of the gold fallin' on the floor was the second. The third was the feet of Tom and Bridget pattenin' as they left the shanty."

"Now, Pat, though he was ragin', had seen how easy it is for gold to pass into other people's possession, so he grabbed the stockin' to keep it with him. Then, gatherin' the sheet about him, the only garment he had to keep out the cold, he left the shanty to felly Tom and Bridget. It was the gray of the mornin', when everything looks like a ghost anyway, and Bridget, lookin' back, saw Pat makin' after 'em, carryin' the stockin'."

"Oh, Tom," she says, "it's comin' wid the gold! I'm goin' to faint!"

"Kape up, darlin'," answered Tom, who was loike enough to faint himself. "There's a bridge beyant. It can't cross runnin' water."

"It couldn't be expected that Pat, who had been dead three days and had nothin' to eat or drink in the meantime, could run as fast as them as had been feastin' at his wake. By the time he reached the bridge he was played out and, settin' on the rail, rested awhile, then went slowly back to his home. There for the first time he took in the situation. The watchers were still snorin', the candles still burnin'. Pat began to feel unisy."

"Is it dead I am?" he asked himself. "I don't know. I'm powerful weak anyway. I'll try a drop of the bottle. If I'm livin', I'll know it by the taste."

"Downin' out a double dram of spirits, he swallowed it."

"I don't know," he said, "whether I'm on earth or in heaven. Like enough, judgin' by me feelin's after the bracer, I might be in heaven. I'll try a bit of the bread and pork."

"Pat sat down at the table and, fillin' his plate and his cup, ate his fill. Lookin' in at his sleepin' wakers and rememberin' Tom and Bridget, he remarked to himself:

"What a dirty trick it is of me, after all, comin' back to life and spoilin' everything!"

This ended the story, and I finished my breakfast at the same time.

"It wouldn't always work for the best to have the dead return," I remarked. "Bring me the morning paper."

Bill of Exceptions.

A bill of exceptions has been prepared by Court Stenographer Cooper in the case of Merlin Jenkins vs. John E. Artz et al. for the purpose of taking the case to the Circuit Court. The action was brought to partition a 75 acre tract in Harrison Township, in which the Court of Common Pleas held at Amy A. Jenkins was entitled to a five-sixths interest and John E. Artz the remaining one-sixth. J. E. Jones appears for plaintiff and Amy A. Jenkins, Flory & Flory, Kibler & Kibler for John E. Artz. The error complained of is refusal to grant a jury trial and error in construing the granting clauses in certain deeds, etc.

Bloomdale—Thos. Fineman, a B. & O. section man at Chicago Junction, was found near here Sunday with his skull crushed and brains scattered along the track. In falling from a flat train his foot caught on a coach and he was dragged 100 feet, his head down, his head being masked by a jelly by the ties.

SERIES OF MISHAPS.

B. & O. Conductor's Narrow Escape--Newark Woman Falls and Breaks Both Arms--Bally Ball Receives Bad Scalp Wound--Fireman and a Lad Have Legs Broken.

Mr. William Howard, a well known and popular B. & O. freight conductor, had a miraculous escape from death at an early hour Monday morning. He had left Midland city on Sunday afternoon on an extra east. Upon reaching Washington Court House about 1 o'clock in the morning he cut off a car load of coal, having instructions to set in on the coal chutes at that place. The engineer, in shoving the car on the chute which is at least forty feet from the ground, failed to notice the signals of the conductor on account of the haziness of the weather, and the result was that the car of coal, with Mr. Howard on it, was precipitated to the ground. The crew of the train, knowing that Mr. Howard had been on the car of coal, hurried to the scene, fully expecting to find him crushed to death. He was exsanguinated from the wreck and a physician was sent for who found that his left leg and right arm had been badly crushed, but that as far as he could see from his hurried examination, no bones were broken. The injured man was placed on the east bound passenger train and arrived here shortly after 8 o'clock this morning. He was then taken to his home, 142 South Fourth street, in Bowers & Bradley's ambulance, and his injuries were attended to by Company Physician, Dr. Foster. Although badly injured it is not thought that there will be any serious results.

Westley Wilson Remains and Cause of the Accident May Never be Known.

Westley Wilson, the young B. & O. brakeman who was found under the Pan Handle railroad bridge last Friday morning, still lay in an unconscious condition Monday morning, and almost all hope of his recovery has been abandoned. The manner of his accident, will probably die with him.

A remarkable thing about the case is the fact that the injured man has long since passed the crisis, and the disproportionate pulse and temperature.

In unusual cases the pulse accelerates as the temperature rises, but when Dr. Smith visited him Sunday his pulse was 63 and his temperature 103 degrees. The pulse had decreased and the temperature increased.

The physician says that Wilson is suffering from meningitis.

IN ST. LOUIS

Prince Henry was accorded a notable reception Monday.

St. Louis, Mo., March 3.—Prince Henry's train arrived this morning, seven minutes ahead of schedule time.

Mayor Wells, former Governor Francis, German Consul F. C. Rieloff, and the reception committee composed of 101 prominent citizens greeted the royal visitor as he alighted from the train. The interior of Union Station was prettily decorated and the grand midday and all approaches to the station were crowded with people anxious to get a glimpse of his royal highness.

The crowd numbered about 25,000.

Mr. Vach, at the head of the German veterans, made a brief address in German, welcoming the Prince.

When the Prince responded in German, urging them to be loyal Americans and love their country. As the Prince ceased speaking he shook hands with all the veterans, making occasional pleasant remarks as he did so.

At the close of the reception here, Prince Henry and party entered a carriage and started on a drive through the principal thoroughfares of the city. There were 40 carriages. A platoon of police acted as an escort. Everywhere the streets were lined with people who cheered the Prince heartily as he passed, and he smiled and bowed his acknowledgements continually.

The Prince was taken to the St. Louis club for breakfast. Mayor Wells presented the Prince with a solid silver and gold souvenir casket containing the freedom of the city.

After the breakfast the carriages were re-centered and a drive to the World's Fair site in Forest Park was begun, where the Prince was shown the progress that has already been made toward building the great fair.

After viewing the twelve hundred acres of fair ground the Prince's train was re-centered by the Prince and his suite and amid the cheers of 25,000 people who had gathered to see the Prince as he left the city, the train pulled out for Chicago.

Chicago, March 3.—A banquet is to be held shortly after the arrival of Prince Henry and a grand ball begin with reception to Governor Van Sant of Minnesota, and a delegation of Lutheran ministers.

Sunday Prince Henry went up Lookout Mountain and looked down on the famous battlefield, and amid a snow squall he heard the story of great deeds of other days.

A PLEASANT EVENING.

Mr. W. H. Williams, the popular B. & O. passenger conductor, and his wife and daughter, Mrs. E. N. Van, entertained about forty of their friends very handsomely on Saturday night at their home on West Main street, in honor of their son, Mr. C. H. Williams, and wife of Cincinnati.

Mr. Williams is connected with the "Big Store" of Cincinnati as floor manager. The evening was passed in having a good time and the diversions consisted of card playing and dancing. One of the interesting features of the evening was the appearance of two typical Germans, a man and a woman, who said they had come to the city and thought they would come in. They stayed on over the night, and were quite enjoyable to the company. The two Germans stayed at the home of Mr. Williams and his wife

Lawrenceburg, Tenn.

Zoa Phora Co., Kalamazoo, Mich.
Gentlemen:—I feel it my duty to inform you what Zoa Phora has done for me. Ten years ago I was married. I had always had painful menstruation and was in bad health. I could not live, but my husband sent for one bottle of Zoa Phora which cured me. Two years later I was troubled with falling of the womb and the doctors said I would have to wear a pessary, but one bottle of Zoa Phora cured me. Four years ago I had a miscarriage and came near dying, but one bottle cured me again. Since then I have kept it always in the house and would not be without it at any price.

Yours respectfully,

Mrs. J. E. Connor.

Zoa Phora is for sale by druggists, or it will be sent direct prepaid, on receipt of price, one dollar a bottle. If you are a sufferer you can make no mistake in taking Zoa Phora at once. If you are interested or have a friend who is a sufferer send for our great book telling why Zoa Phora cures. It is sent free. All letters strictly confidential and answered by the doctor.

We will be glad to send you a large trial bottle free upon receipt of 10c. to cover postage and packing. Address, Zoa Phora Co., Kalamazoo, Mich.

THE RESULT OF AN EXPERIMENT

(Original.)
"Good gracious, mamma," said Miss Louise Hewlett at the breakfast table, "just listen to this:

"Wanted—A woman twenty years old with artistic tastes, capricious, fond of golf, lawn tennis and dancing, to act as secretary."

"Singular," said the mother thoughtfully, "that the advertiser, whom I suppose to be a man, says nothing about beauty."

Since Miss Hewlett was looking for a position she answered the advertisement and was invited to call, which she did in the company of her mother. She found a man of thirty-five, serious, reticent and apparently in his right mind.

"I need also," said the advertiser, Mr. Dudley Vinton, "a housekeeper. If Miss Hewlett will take up her residence here with you in my apartment, filling that position, I will pay each a handsome salary. Pardon me for being so frank, but it is better that I should say in advance that love or matrimony has nothing to do with my intentions."

At this announcement Louise tossed her head.

The offer was accepted, and mother and daughter went to live in Mr. Vinton's apartments. From the first he treated them as guests, though Miss Hewlett was occasionally called upon to write a note or a letter or copy some papers relating to property. At the end of the first month Mr. Vinton paid the salaries and said that he would be glad to continue the arrangement indefinitely. Louise pouted. She filled the terms of the advertisement.

Another month passed. Mr. Vinton was absent occasionally, sometimes by day, sometimes in the evening. Once or twice he was away several days together. What called him where he went or what he did he never told. Louise was piqued and delicately hinted that some reference to these absences would be at least civil. She did not like to be treated like a child or an entire stranger. Mr. Vinton failed to satisfy her curiosity, whereupon she tossed her head and declared that it was high time such a ludicrous arrangement was terminated. Mr. Vinton made no comment upon her action. Indeed he seemed to be rather pleased with it, egging her on to more of the same kind. Finally she became angry and ended the interview in tears. Mr. Vinton then left her without the slightest sign of temper, indeed rather with the appearance of great satisfaction.

One morning a delicate little missive came for Mr. Vinton which fell into Louise's hands. She took it to him and watched him while he read it. His countenance was not altered. Placing the note in his pocket, he went to his bedroom, and soon after Louise, who was watching him from a window, saw him go out with a suitcase.

"Just what I expected," she said. "That note contained an invitation. He's gone to the country to visit some girl he's in love with."

He returned, Louise asked him when he intended to be married.

"I am not engaged," he replied.

They were sitting in the library at the time, and Vinton took up a book. Louise tried in vain to keep her tongue in her head. Finally she could endure the silence no longer and asked a number of inadmissible questions. Some of them Vinton answered, others he parried, while others he received in silence. But not for a moment did he manifest any dissatisfaction with her for attempting to pry into his affairs. Finally he told her that he had been to see an invalid who had died during his absence. Louise arose and strode silently out of the room. Vinton called her back.

"If you don't mind," he said, "I am curious to know what has offended you."

"You have led me to believe what was not true," she said.

She sat waiting for him to continue to deliberate, but he only said, "Thank you very much," she went out and spent the rest of the day in her room with the door locked.

At the end of the year Vinton invited mother and daughter into the library and announced to them that he desired to terminate their present arrangement.

"And now," he continued, addressing Louise, "I will satisfy your curiosity. A year ago I wished to make a very advantageous match. The lady's characteristics I described in my advertisement. I am a theorist and have a theory about women. It is that if a man wishes to know what a woman will do under certain circumstances he must infer that she will act exactly contrary to what he would expect. I desired to test this theory and if it proved a law I would apply it to the lady I wished to marry and thus enhance my chances of success. During the past year I have applied the test to you seventy-eight times, and you have fulfilled the conditions sixty-nine times. You will readily see the advantage of having two women of like characteristics, the one to practice upon the other."

At this point in the theorist's exposition of his methods Louise rose from her seat and was sailing majestically out of the room when Vinton caught her about the waist and held her.

"Darling," he said, changing his tone, "there is one result of the experiment yet to be told. The practice piece became the object piece, and the object piece has passed from the problem. The model who died while I was away was the girl I was endeavoring to win. We never became more than strong friends, and while I was planning for the advantages that would have accrued in marrying her I was falling in love with you."

SOME DETAILS

OF THE CAPTIVITY OF MISS ELLEN STONE.

Close Shave for Brigands—Consultation Was Near the Missionary—Villagers' Attitude.

Constantinople, March 3.—The following account of the captivity of Miss Stone has been obtained by the Associated Press from reliable sources, some of the information having been secured from accomplices of the brigands. After the capture of the missionaries near Bansko, September 3 last, the brigands hastened across the boundary and established themselves on the mountain of Gueltepe, in the Elledoc District, Bulgaria, where the whole population were in sympathy with the enterprise, this fact enabling the band to live comfortably and safely and to keep in touch with the outside world.

While awaiting the result of their efforts to secure the ransom the brigands drew their supplies from the adjacent village of Ledjuma. Feeling perfectly secure the members of the band used to show themselves openly in Kamenica and neighboring villages, until they were warned by their local adherents to be more careful.

The prisoners, however, were jealously secluded. When C. M. Dickinson, United States Consul General at Constantinople, arrived early in October last and disclosed to the authorities the whereabouts of Miss Stone's captors the result was nearly disastrous to the prisoners. The Bulgarian government ill-advisedly pushed troops to the vicinity of Gueltepe, forcing the brigands to break off negotiations, and the band changed its quarters to Kilo.

The cold weather made travel in the mountains a dreadful ordeal for Miss Stone and Madame Tsilka, incumbered as they were with the latter's infant. Every change of camp occurred at night. The mountain roads were frequently almost impassable, being often deep in snow. The brigands treated their captives as kindly as the circumstances permitted, but the food supply was necessarily precarious, though the ladies were given the best the hospitable region afforded. The strain and suspense equalled the physical hardships.

The captives at no time knew their whereabouts, the brigands always telling them that they were not in Bulgaria, and they were in constant fear of an attack by the troops whom the friendship of the natives was not always able to prevent coming close upon the trail of the band. An equal cause of anxiety was the baby which it was frequently feared would die from exposure. Not until November 2 did the American emissaries come in touch with the band, which was then established in a cave near Dubniza; but fear of the troops forced the brigands to another flight.

This was made in a blinding snowstorm which covered the tracks of the outlaws, but caused fearful suffering to the captives. After this the brigands succeeded in completely eluding the authorities and toward the end of November, by a long circuit, they succeeded in returning to their old haunts in the Elledoc District. They then caused to be circulated a report that the captives were dead, and from that time managed to keep Miss Stone and Madame Tsilka safely under cover until the actual release of the captives took place.

HINTS FOR FARMERS

Nitragin and Its Use.

Nitragin is a special culture containing bacteria for use in connection with plants belonging to the clover family. As the yeast cake contains the germs of the yeast plant, the growth of which causes the bread to rise, so Nitragin contains the germs of the bacteria or the bacteria themselves which are found in the nodules on the roots of plants of the clover family and which give to these plants the ability to make use of atmospheric nitrogen. Nitragin might be called, then, the farmer's yeast cake.

The bacteria found in the nodules on the roots of different plants of the clover family are supposed to be for the most part of distinct species for each, and thus there are many different kinds of Nitragin, such as clover Nitragin, soy bean Nitragin, vetch Nitragin, cowpea Nitragin, etc. Nitragin is produced, so far as I am aware, only in Germany.

Several years ago the Bowker Fertilizer company procured a stock and sold or gave away a number of packages of it. With what success it was used I do not know. In our experiments we have found it of use only in the case of plants new to the locality. It appears to be true that the appropriate bacteria are almost everywhere abundant in different localities for all plants which have long been grown in said localities.—William P. Brooks in American Agriculturist.

Working Cows.

In some parts of Europe they make a practice of working cows in the yoke as we do or used to do oxen, excepting that possibly, as they want milk, they are careful to feed well and not overwork. This led to a series of experiments at Stockholm, Sweden, in testing the milk of cows so treated, and they found that the milk was reduced in quantity by the exercise, but its quality was so much richer in butter fat that the working cows actually produced more butter than cows equally good that had no other exercise than they found in gathering their food in the pastures. This opens up a new possibility. If horses and mules are to be so scarce and high priced that farmers are unable to purchase them to replace the stock they now have, when it is worn out, will those who keep cows for butter making or who sell their milk upon the test of butter fat begin to work their cows in the yoke to save expense of keeping oxen? While one test may not be conclusive, the question may be worthy of investigation here.—American Cultivator.

Rape as a Second Crop.

We have frequently tried sowing rape after removing fall wheat, early oats and barley and have met with considerable success. The stubble ground should be plowed just as soon as the crop is removed to a depth of four or five inches and afterward well worked down with harrow or cultivator. It frequently occurs that there is not sufficient moisture present in the soil to germinate the seed, but by having everything in readiness advantage may be taken of small showers. Rape seed may be sown broadcast at the rate of four or five pounds per acre or in rows twenty-four inches apart, using two or three pounds per acre. Ordinarily a rape crop sown in this manner will furnish a large amount of pasture, which may be used six or seven weeks after seeding, but it must be remembered that we have seasons when there is not sufficient moisture to germinate the seed.—James Atkinson in Breeder's Gazette.

Farmers and State Colleges.

The farmers of Pennsylvania demand that its state college be more of an agricultural institution. Committees representing sixteen agricultural societies and associations met at Harrisburg and took vigorous action to secure an appropriation from the legislature that at least a dairy school, up to date in every particular, be established. The buildings and equipment for agricultural development at Pennsylvania's state college are decidedly inadequate. The way to make them of superior advantage is for farmers to demand that this be done. A start has been made, so all should pitch in and help.

Getting Rid of Stumps.

There are a great many popular beliefs that stumps treated with chemicals can be made to rot rapidly. As a matter of fact, however, what we know of such theories leads us to believe that there is nothing in them. Chemicals powerful enough to cause any considerable destruction of the wood are entirely too expensive for ordinary use. The most expeditious method we know of for getting rid of stumps is either by digging them up or pulling them out with some form of stump pulling machine or blowing them out with powder. The latter is a method quite generally employed.—Farm and Home.

King Cotton.

In the cotton crop of 1899 to 1900 North Carolina produced 561,000 bales, of which no less than 455,000 were consumed within the borders of the state. South Carolina stood next in the line of progress, with a production of 921,000 and a consumption of 457,000 bales.—Texas Stockman and Farmer.

A State Fertilizer Plant.

The house of representatives of South Carolina has passed a resolution appointing a commission to take steps to establish a state fertilizer plant, in which the state's phosphate rock will be used, and to operate the factory with convict labor.

AMUSEMENTS.

A musical farce comedy which made for itself a reputation of being original up to date and laughable on its former visit here, will be the attraction at the Auditorium tomorrow night. "A Wise Guy" has been slightly rewritten and tuned up to date for this season and the cast is one of the best now engaged in presenting farce comedy. The principals include Edmond Hayes and Emily Lytton, Ray L. Royce, Moreland, Thompson, and Roberts, Louise Montrose, Raymond Finley, Doherty Sisters, Alice Lorraine, Maude Dett, Jean Cunningham, Lillie Tedwyn and the comedy acrobats, Reno and Richards. "A Wise Guy" is replete with funny situations, original specialties, songs, dances, choruses, catchy music and pretty girls. Prices 25, 35 and 50 cents.

Interesting If True.

A simple old tale wuathrdhuatulu. A simple old dame went to a doctor for a sore ankle. "Take off your shoe and socking and show me the exact spot where the pain is," said the doctor. She did as she was bid, but on examining the place indicated, he observed, "But, my good woman I don't see any sore there!" "Sore there!" she exclaimed, "of course there ain't I never said there was. That's the place where the sore's on my gal's leg." She was not one of that galaxy of graceful and gifted comedienne who will appear in this city soon in that deliciously funny comedy, "The Girl from Chili," which is one of the exceptional good things booked here this season. It comes under the management of Fred G. Conral, "who wonders why a medical man accustomed to see sickness is sometimes a bad sailor."

Getting Away From a Rabbit.

When the link linker from the east had fallen ill in North Dakota, a settler had taken him in and cared for him to the best of his ability, and as soon as he could eat there had been rabbit broth, followed by rabbit stew, roast rabbit, broiled rabbit and rabbit served up in all other ways. This had gone on for two weeks, and then the stranger got up courage one day to say to his host: "Isn't there anything but rabbits to eat in this country?" "Of course," was the reply. "Well, let's have something else." "Jim," said the settler as he turned to his boy, "the stranger has got tired of rabbit and wants a change. Go out and kill a couple of prairie dogs."

Prudence.

"Why don't you go to work?" asked the well meaning friend. "I don't dare to," answered Willie Wishington. "People would think my father had disinherited me, and it would ruin my credit."—Washington Star.

The Very Modest Man.

"I have no use for people who show round about their blood. Who boast a line of ancestry, that dates back to the flood. My folks have been aristocrats since first the world began. But I don't boast about it," said the very modest man.

"Sometimes a class disagree."

Ever in treatment of Winter Ills

What Winter Ills mean. How treated

A remedy that meets every demand

Curative Restorative Reconstructive

Very pleasant to take. Very positive action

Nearly all the medicines sold for the cure of throat and lung troubles, colds, coughs, grippe, bronchitis, consumption, catarrhal conditions—and like winter ill, are mainly stimulants and narcotics. Give temporary relief; do no permanent good.

Any of these troubles indicate the weakening of some vital part—a real cure requires something that builds up.

That best something is cod liver oil in the new form—without the grease. That best form of cod liver oil is Hagee's Cordial of Cod Liver Oil (with Hypophosphites of Lime and Soda.)

Hagee's Cordial is best because it contains all the well-known curative and restorative powers of cod liver oil, with the grease left out. Any stomach will take it and retain it.

There is no disagreeable taste, no unpleasant odor, no nausea, when you take Hagee's Cordial. It is a thin fluid, pleasant to taste—every drop of it goes directly to tissue-making, strength-making, health-making, flesh-making.

BOTHERING A PROFESSOR.

A Mean Trick Played on a Man of Science by a Cowboy.

"When I was railroading in the west," said the ex-conductor, "I once had a party of college professors and students going out to Kansas and Colorado in search of relics of past ages. There was a professor who had written more about the drift period, the stone age and all that than any other man alive, and a cowboy who boarded the train insisted on seeing him for a moment. I brought about the interview, and when they had been introduced the cowboy said: "Professor, I've heard what a mighty smart man you are, and I want to ask you a question. If you can answer it, I'll tell you where your party can find the most of the bones of a mastodon. I saw them less'n a week ago with my own eyes."

"I shall be glad to answer any question," cheerfully replied the professor.

"Then tell me why a horse should have two sets of teeth and a mule only one, though both are grazing animals."

"The professor sat right down, and the smile faded from his face, and the cowboy laughed and went his way. A mule has just as many teeth as a horse, of course, but it was evident that the great man hadn't studied him. He looked serious for a long time and then turned to me and said:

"Didn't that young man twist things about? Isn't it that a mule has two sets of teeth and a horse only one?"

M. QUAD.

Depended on the Gun.

"I ran across a county fair out in the southwest last fall," said the traveler, "and was considerably interested in a horse race in which there was a big field. There were all sorts of horses, and it was owners to ride, and I had a seat in the judges' stand. When the race was finally run, one particular horse came in lengths ahead and another twenty rods behind. It was dead easy to make a decision, but the judges hesitated so long that I asked what was the matter."

"Why," replied one, "we are waiting to see if old Bill Harper, the one who came in last, has his guns alone."

"But what difference does that make?"

"A heck my friend. If he hasn't got his guns alone, he's obstructed in this race, but if he has then he's got to be declared the winner or some of us will get shot."

Secured By Marconi That Wireless Telegraph Messages Were Sent Fifteen Hundred Miles.

New York, March 3—Signor Marconi who arrived on the Philadelphia from Southampton, reported a new wireless telegraph record.

"This time," said Mr. Marconi, can be no error. Captain Mills and Chief Officer Marsden signed each message received as witnesses. Fifteen hundred miles at sea, regular messages were received from the Cornwall station and ticks were recorded at a distance of 2,000 miles. It had been said that my New Foundland messages were due to my imagination and to atmospheric currents, so I requested the Captain's signature to bear me out.

"I am not going to establish any wireless service between Cuba and the United States, as has been reported, nor have I any intention of establishing a line across the English Channel."

LICKING COUNTY INFIRMARY

Newark Gentleman Gives a Glowing Account of a Visit to the Institution.

Through the courtesy of Mr. Howard, one of the Directors of the County Infirmary, the undersigned had the pleasure of visiting that institution one day last week. The morning was bright and beautiful when I took the train. Upon arriving at Union Station I found a carriage in waiting which conveyed me to the institution, arriving there in time to take a smoke and have a friendly chat with the other directors, Messrs. Redman and Vermillion, who were very lavish in their hospitality. Dinner being announced we were ushered into the spacious dining room where a sumptuous repast was in waiting. Mr. and Mrs. Larason proved to be a most charming host and hostess. After dinner, in company with the Superintendent I took a stroll over the premises visiting the hermit's cave, the barn, the rabbits' retreat and chapel, after which we returned to the office where I had a most interesting talk with the directors. After thus enjoying ourselves for some little time we all repaired to the parlor where "Uncle Joe," one of the inmates, discoursed some very fine music upon the violin, accompanied by Mrs. Larason on the parlor organ. The genial host and hostess then took me over the building, visiting every nook and corner. I was very forcibly struck with the air of neatness that pervaded the entire buildings—the halls and bed rooms were immaculate, the inmates all seemed happy and contented.

I was particularly struck with the building containing the old people. I conversed with one old lady who informed me that she was 87 years old. She seemed hale and hearty and in the best of spirits. After visiting the various departments I returned to the dining room and partook of a sumptuous supper, after which I was driven to the station, arriving home just as the sun was gilding the horizon with its receding rays. I had the pleasure of meeting the superintendent of the Delaware county infirmary, Mr. Domagan, and one of the directors, Mr. Lavy. They spoke in the highest terms of the management of our infirmary, saying that "it could not possibly be improved upon." Very high praise, I take it, coming from strangers. I think the people of Licking county have great cause for congratulation that the infirmary is in such capable hands. I can never forget the genuine hospitality extended to me by Mr. Larason, the superintendent, and his estimable wife. It will always remain a bright spot in the garden of memory.

STRIKE SETTLED

LAUNDRY WORKERS RETURNED TO WORK.

The Differences Between the Employees and Proprietor of Newark Steam Laundry Adjusted.

The striking girls at the Newark Steam Laundry returned to work Monday morning, and all the differences, between the proprietor, Capt. W. A. Lovett, and the girls are settled. The girls went out Saturday noon as published in the Advocate on that day, claiming that Mr. Lovett had agreed to pay them full time, if the got out the work which got behind owing to the laundry being closed down a couple of days for repairs.

A meeting of the Local Laundry Workers' Union was held Saturday night, and a committee appointed to wait upon Mr. Lovett with terms of settlement. The committee consisted of Misses Cora and Mame Lock, Mr. Harry Neely, and Mr. Willis Fulton of the Troy Laundry, and Miss Lizzell, Blind, Noel Armstrong and William Lomert of the Newark Steam Laundry. They waited upon Mr. Lovett, who signed the agreement presented to him, and the strike was declared off. The basis of settlement does not include the real cause of the strike which was easily adjusted.

The terms are that he agrees to pay for all overtime at the rate received per working hour, and the cut of 50 cents per week, which has been in force since the smallpox epidemic last fall, is to be restored April 1st.

At Trinity Church.

Dr. G. F. Smythe of Gambier, occupied the pulpit of the Trinity Episcopal church Sunday, owing to the illness of the new rector, Rev. G. W. Van Possen, who was taken ill with throat trouble, on Saturday.

Mr. Farran's Condition.

The condition of Mr. Matthew Farran, who was badly injured in a runaway accident last week, is considerably improved, although the old gentleman is still confined to his bed.

The Passing of Prince Henry.

They were among the 2500 who went down to the Pan Handle station Saturday afternoon to see Prince Henry. The magnificent special came in sight and every neck was stretched that its owner might catch a glimpse of royalty. The train did not even hesitate and His Royal Highness went through the best town in Ohio without putting in an appearance on the platform, that is until he got into West Newark.

One of this little group turned to a companion and remarked: "Well, I guess the Prince is not running for a second term."

Another turned to a friend who had accompanied him to the station and remarked: "If you want to see as big a fool as yourself, just take a peep at me."

Two or three pretty girls were on hand with their cameras to "catch" the Prince, but he wasn't caught.

Mrs. Dr. Adams.

The Advocate on February 26th published an article credited to the Cincinnati Enquirer sent from Toledo, Ohio, telling of Mrs. Dr. Adams' return to that city from London, where she was connected in a way with the Dis Debates. The Advocate stated that the Mrs. Adams mentioned was "said to be Mrs. Lucy Harkey Adams, formerly of Newark."

The Advocate is told today that the story to that effect is incorrect and not wishing to do Mrs. Adams any injustice whatever, this public correction is freely and gladly made. While in Newark Mrs. Adams bore a splendid reputation and her many friends here were very slow to think that she was ever remotely connected with the celebrated Dis Debates.
